General Meeting -- This Monday 3/20

Our next general meeting will be March 20th at 6:00pm at St. Paul Lutheran Church. This meeting will be a forum for Council-at-Large candidates and other local candidates with the exception of those running for District C City Council (see President's Report).

This month we will also have our first Potluck since last summer. Bringing food is not required, of course, but if you would like to, please bring a meat dish if your last name begins with A-E, a vegetable dish if your last name begins with F-G, bread/pasta/rice (N-R), or dessert (S-Z). Thanks!

President's Report

Spring is in the air. And we have a lot going on.

As you may have noticed, our park has been filled with nine young, energetic Americorps volunteers for the past two weeks. They are filling in where we left off on our Washington Square Park Clean Up. The mounds of bags on Elysian Fields are a testament to their hard work in removing all the limbs, leaves and trash that have accumulated in our park. Besides cleaning up they will be repairing the benches and painting the jungle gym.

We have organized a District C Candidates Forum for March 26th with the Bywater association. (See next page.) We have all seven candidates participating and will be asking the hard questions that we hope will separate the wheat from the chaff. This is an important election so please mark your calendars and pass the word along.

All the candidates for elected office except the candidates for District C Council Member and Mayor have been invited to our March general meeting this Monday at St. Paul's. This will be an opportunity for us to hear from them on why they are running for their respective offices and what they will do if elected.

This meeting will also be our first post-Katrina Pot Luck. If you don't have time to cook, consider getting something from one of our local businesses.

As you may know the Marigny is 200 years old and we are looking for ways to celebrate this. Do you have ideas? Let us know.

Editorial

“Agreement paves way for more public use and access on the Mississippi River”

Does this press release headline from the Port of New Orleans sound too good to be true? Well, as the old adage goes, it probably is. The spin on the potential deal between the City and Port, which those two entities claim paves the way for more public use and access, leaves out the possibility of new development—i.e. highrises—on the Riverfront. According to those on the Bring Back New Orleans Commission who are in charge of the planning, if we want a riverfront park then we must let developers build high rises so they can pay for the park. Can that really be the only option?

The City and Port want us to buy into the idea that money-making development is necessary because the Port has already been negotiating a 2000 person amphitheater with Mendelson Entertainment Group. It would not be a stretch to think that they have also been talking with high-rise developers. The park then, may be a way to garner public support, an enticement to make the amphitheater, and perhaps high rises, more palatable.

But the Port has tried to conceal its intentions from the public. In email exchanges with VCPORA (one of the French Quarter neighborhood groups) over the course of a year, the Port promised it would allow public comment on its plans for the Riverfront. But then, without public notice, it voted at its last meeting to enter into a deal with the city that would allow non-maritime development on the Riverfront. The topic did not appear on its published agenda before the meeting. Clearly it did not want the deal out in the open. It begs the question, if the deal is such a good idea, why all the subterfuge?

Fortunately, any redevelopment plan must go through the City Planning Commission and the City Council before it can go ahead.

To add to the deception, the agreement binds the City and Port to enter into "good faith negotiations" with the Trust for Public Land to develop and/or operate the new park. But according to the Trust's website it only "helps" communities identify and secure funding for public land, it neither develops nor maintains that land. Why lie about the function of the Trust? To create an appearance of legitimacy?

The good news is that the Trust for Public Land is a legitimate organization that helps communities buy land for public use. So, as it turns out, we can have a riverfront park without having to rely on the pockets of the developers.

You can find a copy of the proposed agreement between the City and Port on our web site at www.faubourgmarigny.org.

Letters to the Editor

Levees.org responds to Texas visitor

Texas Representative Jeb Hensarling recently visited New Orleans. While here he blasted state and local officials, saying they want a big federal handout without taking any responsibility or showing accountability. He even has some choice comments for the citizens. "Those able-bodied individuals under 65, what are they doing to help themselves?"

This undeserved criticism was especially harsh since the death and destruction that metro New Orleanians suffered was due to disastrous design and planning mistakes by the US Army Corps of Engineers – a federal agency.

As a member of Congress, Representative Hensarling certainly must know that the Corps of Engineers has sole authority over the design and construction of New Orleans' flood protection. And everyone knows that Katrina missed New Orleans. Yet the federally built levees failed catastrophically all over the City.

I met with Dan Hitchings, the Director of Task Force Hope, US Army Corps of Engineers on February 15, 2006. In that meeting at the Corps building on Leake Avenue, he told me that "the Corps is accountable to the people and to Congress for the performance of the flood protection." Clearly it didn't perform.

It is time for the federal government to acknowledge the Corps' causal role in the flooding. And it is high time that Congress provide the resources necessary to make the citizens of metro New Orleans whole.

The most important thing we can do for metro New Orleans is contact any family or friends who live in Texas and ask them to write a letter to Rep Hensarling and send it to this address:

Congressman Jeb Hensarling
132 Cannon House Office Building,
Washington, DC 20515

The second most important thing you can do is write a letter yourself. Your own words are always best. But if you feel you need a sample I suggest going to www.levees.org and viewing the letter posted.

Unwelcome Changes on Frenchmen

Dear Editor,

When I bought and renovated my B&B 4 years ago, it took a full year and a half for me to clear the block of undesirables – people who insisted on using my porch and gates as private privies, people sacking out on the porch, etc. Most of these folks had drugs and weapons on them when the police arrived to check out the call, so all was for the best. Still, I felt frustrated about playing “Clint Eastwood” singlehanded. Other neighbors are absent much of the year, or are simply not interested in trying to help. What to do?

Well, things did settle down, business took off running – until August '05. Now that we are back (lots of us), I find that our dear Frenchman Street has taken a turn for the seedy and the downright nasty – both daytime and during the late night hours.

I am back playing Clint Eastwood with a vengeance, forcing the parking lot to reinstall lightbulbs, most of which had blown out during Katrina. If they are to come on at night, I have to go over and hit the switch myself, since there is no full-time employee. Small price to pay for chasing out the hooker who had the guys lined up against the brick wall next to my kitchen. She only tried it one more time, when she lined them up between several SUVs, but again, outside my kitchen window. Then Clint took over and hollered bloody murder about calling the cops, and they have not come back, so far.

What is definitely happening is a shift in the predominant paradigm – we were a happy mix, some of everything, people getting along, excited about the development and success of new restaurants and clubs and cafes. Now, we appear to have lost Marisol and Santa Fe restaurants, the Spotted Cat appears in precarious physical condition, the Asian grocery has expanded its hours – good for them, they work hard and deserve good fortune – however, come payday, there is a parade of out-of-town workers in and out of the place, getting messed up as fast as possible. I am concerned that their late-night hours of operation are not wholly in the best interest of the neighborhood.

I would be interested in knowing if anyone else is feeling similar frustration. I am tired of stepping over belligerent bodies on the sidewalk once again. I do not feel as safe as I did 6 months ago, especially when on Mardi Gras I had 3 separate incidents of guys jumping my brick fence for a “toilet with some privacy” in my patio!!!!

Anyone out there have any ideas about how we might try and pull ourselves back together? Personally, I am a huge fan of bright (but not harsh) lighting, trash control, especially until the city can get its act together (who’m I kidding??), cleaning the front of your property/shop. I would be really interested in reading what other members have to say.

Patty Marino,

Owner, Bijou Bed and Breakfast, 2116 Chartres Street (Patty notes that her business is “steps from Frenchman Street, in the Faubourg Marigny.”)

Recommendation:

Surely the funniest and smartest local website to appear since the storm is Nolafugees.com. Written and illustrated by an affiliation of New Orleans poets and English teachers, nolafugees had chalked up 600,000 hits within a couple of months of its launch in the fall. Log on to read columns such as, “God’s Honest Truth,” “Bargewatch” (the late, stranded Ninth Ward barge), “Secession!,” and “Starfg w/ Cookie” (a New Orleans society column–yes, that Cookie). The fugees did “C. Ray’s Chocolate City” months before the Times-Picayune’s Chris Rose, and one of its writers coined the phrase “the isle of denial” before it became part of the local lexicon. (The Washington Post made reference to the phrase, attributing it vaguely to “a local scholar.”)

Jokes!

The last six months in New Orleans have been painful and strenuous, but post-Katrina life has also been fertile ground for humor. In future issues, I'd like to publish jokes or stories about life in New Orleans. If you have heard one, or have one to tell, please send it to newsletter@faubourgmargny.org. (Submissions should, of course, avoid offense, but need not necessarily be squeaky clean.)

Grocery Store in the Neighborhood

There can't be many businesses, even in New Orleans, that sell Mardi Gras Beads, wholesale, and fresh produce. The Mardi Gras Zone on the corner of Port and Royal is one. Two weeks ago, owner and Marigny resident Benny Naghi turned part of his bead warehouse into a grocery store. He has canned food, pasta, paper towels, cleaning supplies—the kinds of “groceries” available at gas stations—but also apples, oranges, onions, squash, potatoes, bell peppers, lettuce (romaine and iceberg), eggplant, ginger root, sweet potatoes, and more.

“I got tired of driving out to Metairie or going to A&P for an over-priced onion,” Naghi says. (His groceries are, understandably, more expensive than those of large grocery stores, but he hopes to lower prices when business picks up.) “It made sense for the business and for us,” he adds (since most of the store’s employees live in the neighborhood). He is in the process of expanding the store and adding more fridges, and says he will stock items customers ask for.

Naghi has been in business in the neighborhood—where he also lives—for five years. He says that the Mardi Gras Zone is both the biggest bead supplier and the biggest bead shipper in the city. And while he clearly likes the neighborhood and considers it home, he would like to see it change. A native of Israel, he lived in a neighborhood near Haifa called Zihron Yakov that he says has the same neighborhood feel as the Marigny, but more small businesses. It's a model, for him, of what could happen in the Marigny. “I think it could be really nice if the neighborhood had more small businesses,” he says, explaining that in Zihron Yakov, the cafes and other small businesses support each other and give the neighborhood life. He hopes to see the same situation in the Marigny and believes more small businesses would also make the neighborhood safer.

The Mardi Gras Zone is open 9-9 Monday through Friday, 9-6 Saturday and Sunday, and can be reached at 947 8787 and mardigraszone.com. Groceries can be custom ordered and held by request.

New Business Spotlight

The Marigny's newest business, Bazaar Gift Shop, is selling a "Testomatic." It's a piece of wall art made from a "found" object that has a dial in the center that looks like a fuel gauge. The gauge has three sections: green, yellow, and red, that are marked "bad," "weak," and "good." The front panel is covered in odd-shaped knobs and electrical outlets, and there are colored lights on the top and side panels. When the "ignition" is switched on, the testomatic's needle jumps to "good."

There is also a lamp made out of a bowling ball, with bulbs protruding from the two finger holes, and an "ignition" key in the thumbhole.

Bazaar also has candles, soap, incense, a set of Lincoln

Logs, some vinyl LP's, and greeting cards from Mexico illustrated with a small Day of the Dead figure labeled "la catrina." The "la catrina" cards also have seeds embedded in the card, so that the card can be planted.

Bazaar's owner is Bryant Wilms, a new Marigny resident who opened the business two months ago. "I wanted a place for artists to show work and a place where people could come and appreciate that work," he says. Bazaar's artwork includes jewelry, metalwork and wood pieces by local artists, while other items, such as soap and candles, are "fair trade" products Wilms says.

Bazaar is at Royal and Dauphine and can be reached at 504 309-2288.

Opening hours are 12-7, Tuesday through Sunday.

 4. BBNO Planning Team Now they will be six districts instead of eight. We do not know what other neighborhoods are in our district. It appears that the BBNO planning team will inform us who will be part of the team. As a neighborhood, we need to be proactive. A letter will be written to reinforce the traditional fabric our neighborhood and the other concerns of transportation, infrastructure, green space, and utilize the community model for services by redevelopment the corridor of St. Claude Avenue. 3. Planning Session for FMIA February 20, 2006 The Bring Back New Orleans Committee report divides the city into districts. The Marigny is slated for development according the Committee's report. It appears they want input but not involvement.

The audience asked to identify specific issues five years from now and use post note per question to answer the following:

1. What is the one thing you most want to happen in the Marigny
2. What is the one things you do not want to see happen in the Marigny

We divided into workable groups to discuss seven questions which were given to each participant on a handout. The questions were as follows:

Q1: What types of new housing on vacant land do you want to see or not want to see in the Marigny?

Q2: Do you want to see buildings demolished to accommodate new construction?

Q3: Commercial use - Where do you see it happening and what types do you want?

Q4: Knowing that there is a strong City Hall interest in the Riverfront for commercial use, how do you want to see it developed or what do you not what to see?

Q5: What is your vision for St. Claude Avenue as our commercial corridor? What do you want or not want to see?

Q6: Knowing that there are a number of large vacant buildings, how would you like to see them redeveloped? Are there uses you are opposed to? i.e. Colton School, Sts. Peter and Paul Church, Schoen Funeral Home.

Q7: What kind of improvements to the infrastructure do you want to see?

After each group finished discussing the seven questions, one spokesperson from each group presented their findings as the question was read. A summary of the responses to the questions will be printed in the newsletter and the full responses will be posted on the web site. A report will be written based on the responses.

Additional comments from the participants:

Q: How to involve more people from the neighborhood to join FMIA?

A: FMIA has gone door to door to 3500 households with handouts twice. It is labor intensive and volunteers are desperately needed. We also have the website, the 800 number, and the bulletin board at St. Paul's Lutheran Church.

Q: What about posting fliers at public areas?

A: We have done that but not enough and that is a great reminder to do more. We are going to design and create a brochure of the Marigny which will be given to every household in the Marigny.

Q: Is there a census of how many shotguns are in the Marigny?

A: No answer was given

Q: What about having a Faubourg Marigny Festival?

A: If someone is interested in taking this project on, interest is there. Manpower is the real barrier. Our focus is FMIA Home Tour. Ideas that have been discussed are jazz concerts in Washington Square, green market and art market but manpower is needed.

Meeting was adjourned at 8:30 pm
